

is head of the National Federation of War Veterans of France.

Smokes Pipe Before Landing

Two navy boats escorted the tug up the harbor. A light southerly wind was blowing and a slight haze lay over the city skyline as Marshal Foch gazed on it for the first time. Cheers rose from the wharf as the colors of his French uniform were recognized in the distance. Time and again he waved his cap in recognition of the greeting. Finally, going into the pilot house, he asked how long it would be before they landed. Hearing that they still had half an hour he drew out of his blue army overcoat pocket his favorite pipe, a curved briar, and started to puff it with marked satisfaction. His smoke ended abruptly when he was officially informed that the salute of nineteen guns due him was about to be fired.

Standing at attention at the rail on the forward deck he answered the first gun of the salute with his hand to his cap. He stood looking gravely out of sea as the cannon boomed at measured intervals. Dropping his military manner at the end of this ceremony, he took an animated interest in the skyline and the crowds lining the Battery seawall. As the tug approached the pier every whistle and siren in the vicinity struck its welcome, creating a deafening din. Twenty-five thousand cheering persons augmented the volume of noise.

It was 2:15 p. m. when Marshal Foch stepped on American soil. For a few minutes he seemed dazed with the noise. Five hands tried to outplay one another. The police strained to hold the surging crowds in check as they rushed forward. A smile gradually dawned on his face as the volume of noise, having reached its crescendo, died away.

Demonstrations on Broadway

When they parted and Foch posed for photographers the crowd again broke loose. Ticker tape and streamers floated down from the buildings until Broadway seemed to be under a blizzard. Every window was packed with shouting men and women. There were cries of "la France!" and "Bravo!" A platoon of mounted police preceded the Marshal along the line of march from Battery Place toward Bowling Green and up Broadway toward City Hall. In the automobile with Marshal Foch were Ambassador Jusserand, Assistant Secretary of War Wainwright and Colonel Roberts. Mounted police flanked the car on either side. In response to the ceaseless ovation Foch stood up in his car so that all might see him. He saluted and bowed again. Frequently his eyes followed the line of a skyscraper in passing.

Fifty automobiles, containing military, naval, Federal, state and city officials, were in the procession. A group of Red Cross nurses occupied one car. Here and there in the crowd the blue of a police uniform could be detected. In City Hall Park Mrs. Bella Brengel, an Italian actress, and a group of men of Arc. She was incensed in gold leaf and bore a gold hauberk. Her helmet with open visor was also gilded, so that she appeared as a statue-like figure mounted on a white horse. Her husband stood beside her also in a gilded suit and wearing a helmet. The statue was posed on behalf of the New York Police and the American people, which is endeavoring to replace the signal towers in Times Square with statues. Marshal Foch saluted the representation of Joan of Arc as he mounted City Hall.

Official Welcome at City Hall

It was here that New York officially welcomed the generalissimo. In the Aldermanic chamber he was presented formally with the freedom of the city, while outside and inside a tumult of bravos and cheering rose from the chamber was cleared for the occasion and French and American flags hung in profusion. Mayor Hylan welcomed his guest on the steps and led him inside, taking his arm as he stepped up on the dais.

"The City of New York joyously and heartily welcomes the democratic and determined master of military maneuvers, Marshal Ferdinand Foch," the Mayor said. "In extending official greeting to our distinguished guest it is not merely the customary compliment of propriety, but is an assurance of deep love and affection between the peoples of France and America and a tender of sincere acknowledgments to the illustrious services of the commanding General of the Allied armies in the cause of freedom and humanity."

"We can never forget that France was our first ally in Revolutionary days, sending men and munitions to our aid, and American colonists for their independence. Nor can we forget the beloved French patriot who came to us in that hour of need, the heroic son of France whose name is entwined in our hearts with that of Washington—the Marquis de Lafayette."

"When the American Expeditionary Forces sailed across the sea to take their places by the side of the soldiers of France we were seeking to repay in a measure this early obligation by welding the souls of France and America in perpetual union and alliance."

"Let us beseech God that there may never be a recurrence of the horrors from which the nations of the world have emerged and that France, America and all the peoples of the earth may achieve in the paths of peace still greater victories and enjoy for all time those blessings won at such a costly sacrifice."

"The City of New York is indeed honored to extend the hand of welcome to the foremost strategist of Europe, whose splendid and superb organizing ability, intrepid courage and unwavering devotion to duty in dire extremity proved him a pathfinder of victory to the Allied cause."

"On behalf of an appreciative citizenry which has with grateful honor for service, it is with infinite pleasure that I confer upon one of the world's greatest generals, already crowned with the laurels of military renown, the highest compliment which our municipality can bestow upon a distinguished visitor, the freedom of the City of New York."

The Mayor then presented to Marshal Foch a silver box containing the freedom of the city. Inscribed on the box was the following:

The Freedom of the City of New York is hereby tendered to Marshal Foch, commander in chief of the Allied armies, who, standing side by side with the Allies, brought a new freedom to the whole world. Warm felicitations and greetings are extended to the Marshal of France, who comes to us with renewed assurances of the high regard of the Republic of France for the American people. Reciprocal sentiments of love, admiration and esteem are shared by all Americans for the brave people of the French Republic, so ably represented in the person of Marshal Foch."

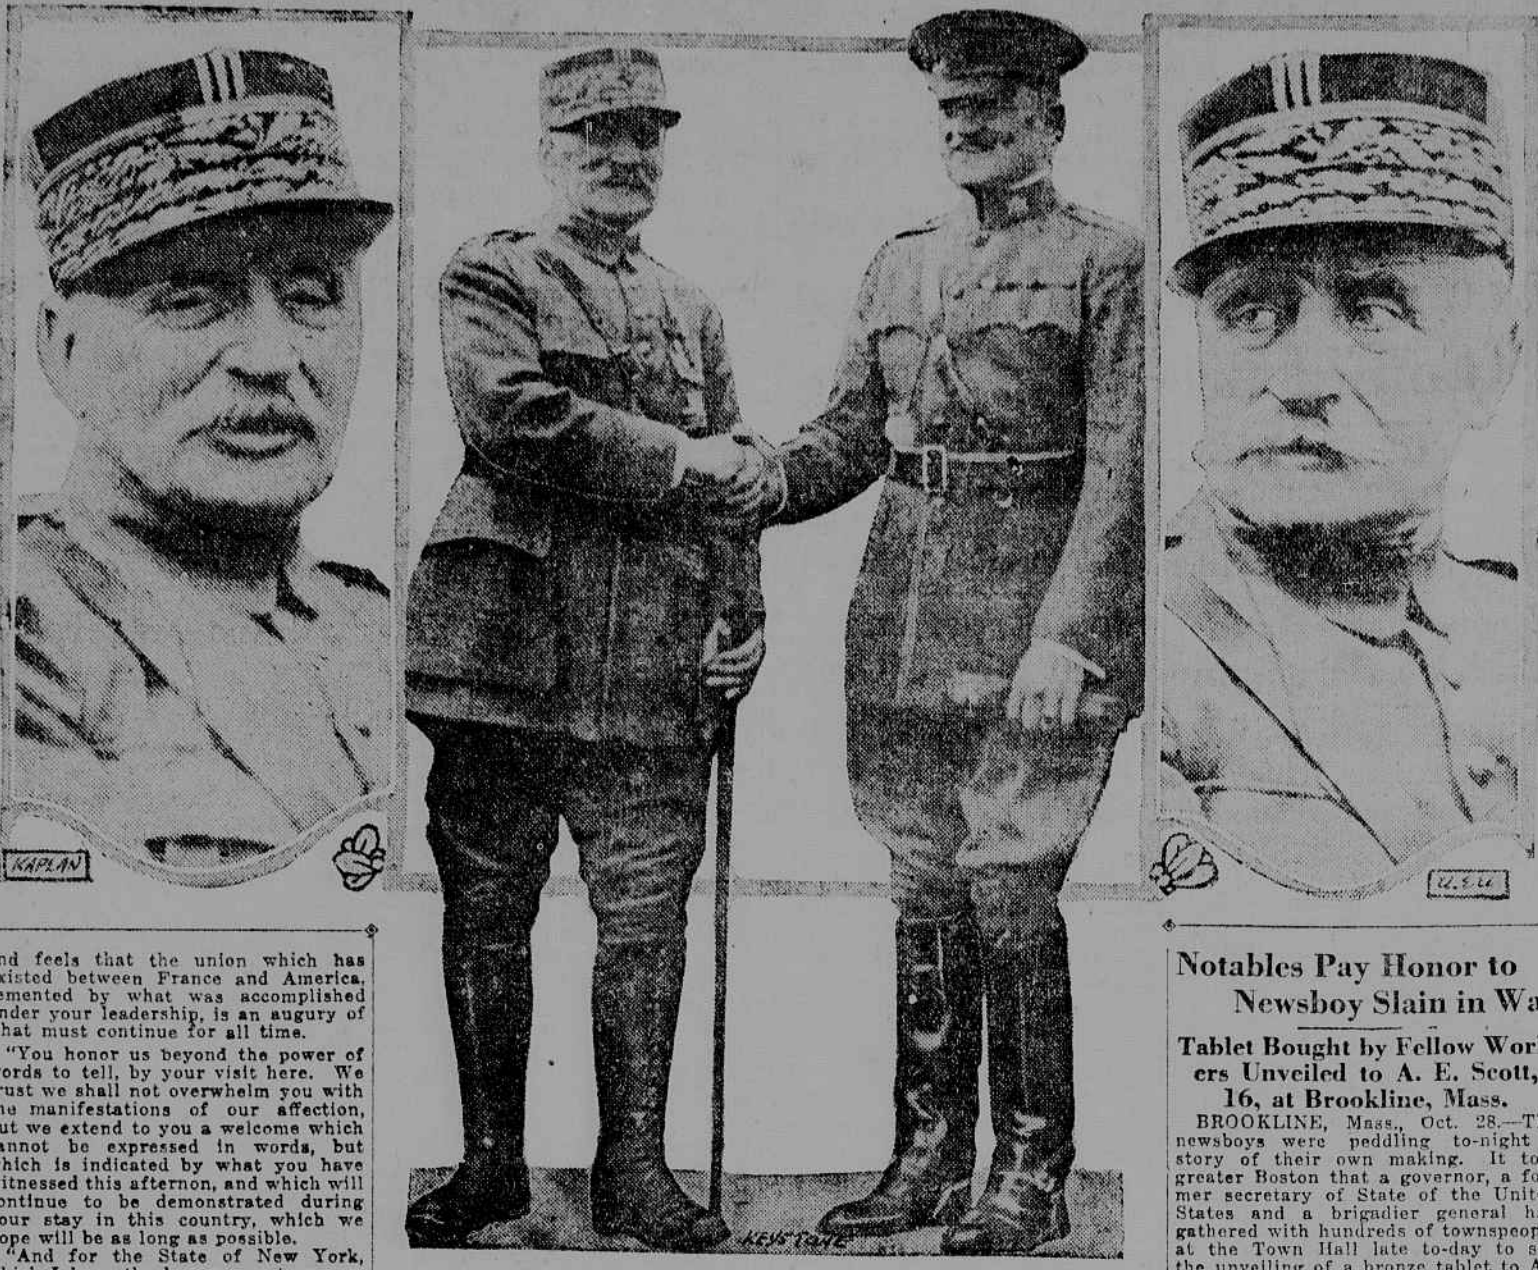

Governor Extends Greeting

Governor Nathan L. Miller then welcomed the Marshal, saying:

"You have had a demonstration already more forcible than any words of mine can be of the place you hold in the hearts of the American people. They have acclaimed you and they acclaim you leader, not alone because you are the First Soldier of the Age, but because with your military genius you combined the great qualities of head and heart which made the victory, which under your leadership was won, possible."

"America acclaims you as her own

Foch in Varying Moods, as New York Saw Him

In the center the French Marshal is shown receiving the greeting of General Pershing. The small picture at the left shows his expression as he glimpsed the vast welcoming crowd at the Battery. The one at the right was snapped during his triumphal progress up Broadway to the City Hall.

Foch to Drink Only Water Throughout Stay in America

Marshal Has No Wine in His Baggage, Says His Physician, and Will Observe Both Letter and Spirit of Dry Law

ON BOARD MARSHAL FOCH'S SPECIAL TRAIN, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28 (By The Associated Press).—Marshal Foch will observe the letter and spirit of the prohibition law while in the United States.

While diplomatic precedent would permit him to bring wine and liquor into the country for his personal use, Dr. Paul Andre, his personal physician, declared to-night that the Marshal intended to follow the American custom of taking only water with his meals.

"I lack words to express the sentiment I felt when I landed in this beautiful city. The atmosphere of sympathy around me touches me deeply. I am very happy to see the city from which came so many fighters whose I had the honor to lead into battle. They all shared the sentiment that led us to victory."

"I want to express my gratitude to the Mayor and officials of New York for conferring upon me the freedom of the city, a document which will be preserved for all time in the sacred archives of my family."

"In all the speeches made here I find more than the expression of a nation. I find the expression of a union over a sacred cause which was cemented by victory. It was a cause that will never fail. The union will continue in peace, as well as in war, despite the many problems confronting us. The union of two democratic, liberal nations like America and France is indissoluble. I am confident that the union will live forever."

Crowds Line Uptown Streets

Immediately following the ceremony at City Hall Marshal Foch proceeded to the Pennsylvania Station. The route was by Lafayette and Ninth streets to the station. The streets were lined with crowds and the blizzard of Broadway was repeated in multi-colored streamers. Elze bells were rung at the station on Lafayette Street and prisoners peered through the bars of the Tombs as the great French general flashed past.

At the station a police bugler sounded the call to attention with flourishes and the patrolmen and mounted policemen came stiffly to attention as Foch and his escort approached. They were greeted by William H. Egan, Station Master Extraordinary, who provided further escort for the party on its way to the train. The vaulted roof rang with the cheers of 10,000 as they passed through.

Marshal Foch stepped aboard his car at 4:10 o'clock for Washington. The late arrival of baggage caused some delay in departing, which gave him a chance to thank the members of his escort and express appreciation for the demonstration tendered him. The train pulled out of the station at 4:35 p. m.

Busy Time for Police Details

The police had a busy time keeping the crowds in check all along the line. Chief Inspector William J. Lahey made arrangements for the police to accompany Marshal Foch and his party from the Battery to City Hall and from there to the Pennsylvania Station. The police were in charge of the motorcade which was led by Lieutenant Anthony Howe. Three hundred patrolmen reported for special duty at the Battery.

The George Washington, which brought General Pershing here an hour or two in advance of Marshal Foch, raced for three days so that the American General would land in time to greet the French General. After arriving at Pier A on the army boat Lexington General Pershing was met by Dock Commissioner Hubert and General Bullard. They proceeded to Battery Park to wait for the arrival of Foch, and were joined there by Governor Miller and other members of the National Guard and regular army.

Pershing Kisses Little Girl

As General Pershing descended the stairs to go out on the pier to meet Marshal Foch Miss Gladys Perkins, of 568 West 111th Street, stepped from the crowd and presented him with a huge bouquet of American Beauty roses. General Pershing thanked the little girl and kissed her.

"Try it again!" shouted some one in the crowd.

"Lucky man!" cried another.

After this incident the general proceeded to the pier and waited the arrival of the Vigilant.

A sword will be presented to Marshal Foch at Georgetown University, Washington, by the Jesuit universities, colleges and high schools of America. It is to be given as a testimonial to a fellow alumnus, for Marshal Foch was educated at the College of St. Clement, in Metz.

Marshal's Trip To Capital Is Long Ovation

Says He Was Prepared for It by U. S. Troops' Spirit and Now Knows Same Feeling Animates People of N. Y.

Welcomed to Washington

Made Member of American Legion as He Quits Train; Great Crowds Cheer Him

From a Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—After a day of continuous ovation, in which he was welcomed to the United States by hundreds of thousands of his admirers, Ferdinand Foch, Marshal of France, arrived in the national capital this evening, again to be greeted by a great demonstration.

Just before his arrival in Washington, however, the commander in chief of the Allied armies forgot for the moment the glamour surrounding his own presence in America and paused to pay tribute to this country's fighting men.

Demonstrations Not Artificial

It was after he had finished dining in his private car, when, asked by correspondents accompanying him what he thought of his reception, he replied with characteristic vigor:

"This reception has not surprised me, given the knowledge I had of the American people through the fighters I had seen at work. I have been very happy that, in my opinion, the same feeling animates all the people of New York."

"These manifestations are more striking, more spontaneous. They are not artificial, and they are the true language of the people, who say: 'What you have done we have wanted.'"

Continuing, Marshal Foch said he was most happy to be received "as I am by the American Legion, with which I am bound by special ties, which manages perfectly well my journey in America, and I am certain they are going to make it excellently up to the end."

Evades Political Queries

As the Marshal spoke he beamed at Ambassador Jusserand, who interpreted for him, but he evaded carefully any questions which might be construed as a forecast on matters political. One thrill the interview provided came when the French hero was asked to comment on the firm ties of friendship existing between his own country and America.

Ambassador Jusserand replied in English that he thought it unnecessary to comment on this subject, that there could be no question of it, and the Marshal vigorously nodded his assent.

The journey from New York to Washington was uneventful, save for the talk with correspondents. With his hosts and his staff, Marshal Foch remained in his private car until the special train of the Pennsylvania Railroad bowed into the Union Station in a record time of 4 hours and 38 minutes.

Awaiting him in Washington was a reception committee with General Pershing at its head, although it was a mystery to most of those present how the capital after the manner of the American commandant had managed to get to the capital in time to greet the distinguished guest.

Thousands of persons were in the station, and they sought to raise the roof with their cheers, while the Marshal and his party entered the President's room through an honor guard composed of members of the American Legion.

Inducted Into Legion

In the President's room was a color guard from George Washington Post, No. 1, of the Legion, headed by its commander, Howard Fiske. The Marshal halted and with due ceremony was inducted into the Legion.

"You are elected a member of the George Washington Post," Fiske said, "and I hand you the ceremonial badge and membership card."

After the ceremony the Marshal, in the visitor's blouse, he was handed a fountain pen and signed the card which makes him one of the Legion's foremost members.

The Marshal was much affected by this ceremony, which was a big surprise to him. He is the first of the Legion's guests to be thus honored, although all will be similarly inducted before their return overseas.

Outside the station a troop of United States cavalry was waiting to escort the Marshal to the Willard Hotel, and he will stay there until Sunday morning, when he will depart for the American Legion convention at Kansas City.

Veterans Accompany Marshal

On the train with Marshal Foch are the following soldiers and veterans: Captain L'Hopital, his aide; General W. D. Connor, honorary aide, of the United States Army; Lieutenant de Soubeyran, secretary to the Marshal; C. M. Bertrand, president of the French War Veterans; Francis E. Drake, commander of the Paris Post of the Legion; Colonel Frank Parker, Stephen Lamm, General Dettmer, chief of staff for the Marshal; Major Demierey, an aide; Alton T. Roberts, chairman of the Legion's National Committee on the Reception of Distinguished Guests; Franklin D. Oiler, past national commander; E. F. Alger, H. E. McPherson, Chester Bolton, R. C. Norton, Henry D. Lindsey, past national commander; D. M. Proctor, General Roy M. Hoffman, David Bagin, Jr., C. W. Montgomery, Lieutenant Louis Van Dem Eeke, of the French War Veterans Association; Van R. C. King and Colonel de Lancey Koutze, of New York.

One of the most prominent veterans in the party, who will accompany Marshal Foch throughout his trip, is Captain Eddie V. Rickenbacker, American ace of World War I.

The program set for Marshal Foch tomorrow is not an extensive one. The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible. He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy. It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon. Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

Horse Nonsense

"Hallowe'en makes me long for the old Home Town!" sighed Winnie, who helps Knickerbocker Ned supply The Avenue with ice. "The windows are full of Jack o' lanterns and witches, but how're the boys to have any fun when there's no gales to steal?" "Cheer 'em up," said Ned—"they say it'll blow flour here, and I'm so black they make me look as if I'd run into an industrious young snow storm. And there'll be plenty of parties, too. I heard the driver say 'Extra orders for nearly every house.'"

"Knickerbocker Ice gives sparkling new cider just the frost-bite it needs. So swing in, old girl, to our steady 'gait'—where you know we'll get a big, juicy apple for Hallowe'en."

Knickerbocker ICE Company

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.

Marshal Foch is to address the Legionaires Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon will lead a great parade with Generalissimo Diaz, of Italy, and Jacques, of Belgium, and Admiral Beatty, of England.

The program set for Marshal Foch

tomorrow is not an extensive one.

The Legion officials fear the extensive trip through the country may tax his strength and are arranging as the ceremonies for him as possible.

He will have luncheon with the President and Mrs. Harding, and will be the honor guest in the evening at a dinner in the French Embassy.

It is possible that he will tour the capital by automobile during the afternoon.

The party will depart Sunday morning for Kansas City, arriving for the convention on Monday afternoon.